

Call for Proposals and Exhibition Opportunities

Midwest Society for Photographic Education

September 30th – October 3rd, 2010

Time for Light
Kalamazoo, Michigan

Hosted by

Frostic School of Art
Western Michigan University

The Regional Midwest SPE “Time for Light” Conference is actively seeking proposals and artwork for exhibition from students and professional artists, which address the benefits or consequences of photography as it affects societies and cultures behind or in front of the lens, so that image-makers may better understand the past, record the present, and shape the future. The conference invites practitioners and scholars to contribute to a critical discourse and meditation on the restoration, renewal, and new discoveries of historic and post-historic photographic discourse and practice. As we move forward and look backward the conference will convene in Kalamazoo to make and take time for light.

For artists, educators, students, and scholars, the conference programming will

- Discuss the contribution of photographic media to art, society, and culture.
- Explore the ways in which photographic artists employ traditional and new media to convey content.
- Identify and share how the contemporary practice of photography shapes the teaching and learning of photography.
- Reveal the emerging and traditional language needed to discuss the place of photography in the world of art and scholarship.

Share your creative activity and join us in Kalamazoo for this exciting conference!
